

Hang out in The Lobby

New restaurant will open its doors today

By JOHN G. MILLER

Denver Daily News Staff Writer

A new restaurant at the corner of Arapahoe and 22nd streets opens its doors today, and it's not Baron von Ruzi's.

"That name was a running inside joke until we could think of a name for the restaurant," said Ra-chael Schwab, manager and part owner of The Lobby.

Aptly named "The Lobby" because of its location in the lobby of the old Paris Hotel, the new restaurant will serve "sophisticated comfort food" for affordable prices.

"It's American food with a flair," Schwab said.

All of the standard appetizers and entrees are prepared with a special twist designed to separate them from the norm.

THE LOBBY

"Our stuffed burgers are really stuffed," Schwab said. "We actually roll out the beef, layer in the cream cheese and jalapeño or whatever, and roll it back up so that the flavor cooks through the whole burger."

The menu includes fried bleu cheese or pancetta-wrapped shrimp as appetizers, while entrees include grilled ribeye or [See LOBBY, page 28]